>chapter 1

Hiccup

This morning we found out about a horrible blizzard about to hit Berk. Getting ready for the blizzard was hard we had to stock pile fire wood, round up the animals, make sure everyone had enough food, reinforce the shelters, and exorcise the young dragons.

We starter with gathering and stock piling the fire wood we went into the forest to get wood for cutting. Fishlegs grabbed a tree that had just been felled, having to out do him Snotlout managed to carry two. Ruffnut and Tuffnut had one, i grabbed a hold of a small one but i couldn't carry it Astrid walked over "Hey Hiccup let me help" She said lifting the base end. I could tell she was carrying over half of the weight.

then we got to the rounding up of the animals. every time I got any of the animals gathered they would bolt. then when we got all but one of the animals into the barn the last animal was the largest ram we had (Gobbers experiments trying to come up with giant sheep that the dragons couldn't carry off) so it was about the size of a large dog. We circled it, it charged me... SMACK the top of his head slammed into my chest knocking me backwards. Everyone else chased after it, as i laid there trying to catch my breath. When everyone gave up chasing him he pranced over to the barn, I could swear he was sticking his tongue out at me.

>Toothless came over and looked at me with the 'why are you there' look he used sometimes. "you ever been gored in the chest by a ram?" I asked not sure why but I felt like I needed to explain. "Not fun" I said to him and with that he helped me up.

The others finished checking the food store and reinforcing the shelters. Now we got to what I was good at riding dragons. "We each take a young dragon and ride it around the island once, there are enough dragons that we each should take three trips." I said to them. "and we should stay together in case the storm comes faster then we thought" I finished grabbing a young dragon and taking off.
>'The first two trips went great' I thought to my self as i waited for the others to land, i climbed onto a deadly nadder this time. "lets see what astrid likes about you guys" I said. "Lets go" I shouted to the others as we took off. Then a gust of wind hit us the nadder I was riding wasn't strong enough to break free from the powerful embrace of the wind and we were carried off.

When the wind finally lost enough strength for us to break free we were near an island I did not recognize. The sea was white, I dove down for a closer look. the top was frozen but not thick enough to walk on I decided. Then I saw the boy.
>He was running, dancing, skating, along the ice he held a staff in his hands spinning jumping leaping it was amazing, 'He was amazing' "No Hiccup you shouldn't be thinking like that" I said to my self. But I couldn't stop looking at him, the way he moved was so graceful so beautiful it made astrid's most complicated figure skating routine look like ice hockey compared to him. As I was staring at him he started to move closer to me, closer to the thin ice. 'no' I thought to myself 'he has to stay on the thicker ice'. After this i decided to yell to him "GET OFF THE ICE ITS NOT SAFE!" As I was leaning down to yell this an updraft hit the dragon I was riding I lost my grip plummeting towards the ice I screamed "AAAAAHHHHHH!" Then I hit the ice I could feel the cold and everything went black.

2. Chapter 2

Jack was having fun skating, running, sliding, jumping along the ice as he put a layer of ice over the water around the most recent island he had visited. Trying all sorts of new tricks a spin here a flying leap there. 'if someone could see me what a show this would be' he thought laughing. he had had a long time to practice. Then he saw it a blue and yellow stripe streak past then slow down.

Was that a... dragon? He shook his head and looked again sure enough it was a dragon. 'Thats strange' he thought to himself 'the only dragons I have seen were the size of cats'. the dragon went down towards the ice jack thought 'this is my chance to get a good look at it.' as he got closer he noticed a figure on the dragons back. 'Wow not only are there large dragons but there are people crazy enough to ride them' Jack thought as he moved closer to get a better view.

>As Jack neared where the dragon was he heard a voice yell at him

"GET OFF THE ICE ITS NOT SAFE" I looked around and did not see anyone 'did he see me?' jack thought confused but he did not have time to think about before the dragon jerked upward and the figure was dislodged and plummeted towards the ice screaming "AAAAHHHHH". seeing this jack rushed over to the new hole in the ice he reached in but didn't feel him jack ended up sticking his head to see where the figure was. 'there' Jack thought as he reached out and grabbed the riders tunic and pulled him out.
Noticing the boy wasn't breathing Jack created a temporary shelter out of ice. Jack started a rhythmic compression of the boys chest. He leaned down to try to breath air into the boys lungs. Their lips met Jack closed his eyes for a little then thought 'no jack you need to concentrate' he exhaled he could feel a slight inflation of the boys chest. Then continued the rhythmic compressions. While Jack was leaning down breathing air into the the boys lungs, Hiccup started breathing again. He noticed a strange boy was next to him, then noticed that the boys lips were in contact with his they were cold it felt great not wanting it to end he closed his eyes again. Sitting back up to start the compressions again, thats when he noticed the boy was breathing.
>"Thank goodness" jack said exhaling. hiccup opened his eyes saw the boy watching him. he closed his eyes again and everything went black.

'I need to get him to the island' Jack thought. crafting a sled out of the temporary shelter he started towards the island gaining speed as he went. Reaching the island in a few minutes. Jack found a cave laid the boy down in it then got some wood. Luckily Jack met a cat sized dragon he picked it up and set it on his shoulders and went back to the cave. He had the dragon light a fire. To warm the boy up, he just sat watching the boy waiting for him to wake up.

>Jack sat there watching the boy sleep. The way that his chest rose and fell he was so 'cute' jack thought. As he got up from where he was sitting and went out to get some food for the boy. Floating into the air he spotted a small bird. Moving towards it and reaching out. The bird spotted him and started flying away. Chasing the bird Jack was gaining on it he grabbed ahold of it then crashed into a snow drift. Dusting himself jack stood up still holding the bird jack headed back to the cave. Plucking the bird Jack placed it on a spit over the fire.
Jack sat next to the boy occasionally rotating the bird. Jack looked over at the boy, brushing the hair out of the boys face. It was amazing how the firelight made his face glow and his skin was so warm. 'He must have someone who cares about him a lot where he comes from' jack thought 'how could he not' he thought 'that small frame of his was so cute, the glimpse of his eyes they were beautiful how he called out to me when he thought i was in danger'

Jack sat there thinking he was so lost in thought he didn't notice the boy had woken up and was staring at with those beautiful emerald eyes.
>"Hi" the boy said shocking jack back to reality. "W-what?" jack asked startled. "I said hi" the boy said to Jack. "Are- are you talking to me?" jack asked gesturing to himself. "Noooo" the boy said sarcastically "i am talking to the rock behind you... of course i am talking to you who else would i be talking to?" hiccup said as if him talking to jack was nothing big. Jack started pulling his hand away from the boys face. "If you are talking to me that means you can see me" Jack said joyously and a little embarrassed. Hiccup grabbed jacks hand. "don't go" he said as he sat up. "Why would I leave?" jack asked as if that was the last thing on his mind. "You see me." Jack stated plainly. "by the way what is your name? or should I call you dragon boy?" Jack asked. "Hiccup. What about your's" Hiccup asked. "Jack." Jack said then asked. "Are you hungry?" "Starving." Hiccup replied.
Jack took the bird off the spit handing it to Hiccup. "HOT!" Hiccup said dropping the bird on his lap. "I didn't notice, sorry" jack said apologizing.. "don't worry about it" Hiccup said for some reason he couldn't stand seeing him like that. "why didn't you notice that it was hot?" Hiccup asked. "I-I-I don't know" Jack said "I have been like this since i can remember" Jack said as his eyes began to tear up. Hiccup reached out and hugged Jack, he didn't know why he did it just something inside him told him he needed to. When he did he could feel why jack couldn't tell the bird was hot his skin was cold like touching a stone that you just took from a stream. Jack realized that Hiccup was shivering. "Are you okay?" He asked Hiccup. Hiccup shrugged. "Just cold I guess" He replied. Jack took off his cloak and draped it over Hiccup's shoulders saying "Eat the bird your hungry remember." Jack put his arm around Hiccup and thought 'this is great someone who is finally able to see me.' They sat there together enjoying each others company.

4. Chapter 4

Shit sorry guys. I forgot that when I copy and paste from yarny I have to put the line breaks in again.

I am so sorry, I forgot about this story but here is an update.

Hope you guys like it. And I remembered to start a new paragraph when i had a new person talk.

I think I have kept you guys waiting long enough so here it is!

>The storm hit, it started getting colder. The small fire the jack made was not enough for hiccup anymore, he started shivering. Glancing around he did not see anything that he could use to keep the wind out of the cave. Hiccup was getting nervous did he survive the ice just to die in a storm?

Jack saw hiccup start shivering. "What's wrong?" he asked.

"It is getting really cold in here." Hiccup answered. "Do you see a way to close up the cave?" Hiccup asked.

Jack thought about it. "this might work" Jack said as he used his staff to create a wall of ice at the entrance. "Is this helping?" Jack asked sitting back down near Hiccup.

"Yeah, its getting better." hiccup said, as he tried to get comfortable. "How long do you think this storm will last?" Hiccup asked moving closer to jack.

"I don't know. I don't normally care, storms don't bother me." Jack replied letting Hiccup sit next to him.

"Why not?" Hiccup asked.

"I don't really feel the cold." Jack said. "Why were you on that dragon with this storm coming? He asked Hiccup.

"The young dragons needed exercise, and..." hiccup paused.

"And what?" Jack asked.

"And... why don't storms bother you?" Hiccup asked dodging the question.

"I don't feel cold" Jack answered. "And that isn't answering my question" he said.

"Why don't you feel cold?" hiccup asked.

"I JUST DON'T." Jack raised his voice. "Sorry... For as long as I can remember I don't feel cold." Jack said. 'Why did i blow up like that, he was just asking a question and I yelled at him for no reason. some friend you are, first person who can see you and you yell in his face'

'stupid, stupid, he saves your life not once but twice and you pester him because you don't want to answer his question. He probably thinks I am a complete jerk now.' "I wanted to get a break from the village. The attention has died down since i first rode a dragon. Now i feel completely useless again." hiccup says. "I cant even move a log." Hiccup muttered.

"I'm sorry" Jack said, as he put his arm around Hiccup. Hiccup flinched. "Sorry again." Jack said moving his arm away from Hiccup

"No it's alright." Hiccup. "I was just surprised, you can put your arm back if you like?" Hiccup said.

"Are you sure?" Jack asked putting his arm around Hiccup again. "Yeah." Hiccup said. "It felt... Nice." 'Why would you say that he probably thinks you are a freak!'

Jack noticed how Hiccup just stopped talking and zoned out. he leaned over and kissed Hiccup. "Why did i do that?" Jack thought aloud.

"I don't know" Hiccup replied, this time it was Hiccup who kissed Jack. "But I liked it..." he said before his lips met Jacks again...

5. Chapter 5

New chapter couldn't get to sleep so I wrote it.

so Hope it isn't a disappointment. And guest you should make an account :) have a nice day.

>Hiccup woke up when he heard the wind start to die down. Light was shining through the ice wall. Jack's arm was around Hiccup. Hiccup nudged Jack.

"Ugh" Jack groaned.

"Hey, wake up." Hiccup Nudged Jack again. "How long do you think it has been?" Hiccup Asked Jack.

"I don't know. Some amount of time." Jack said as he sat up and smiled at Hiccup. "Does it matter how long its been?" Jack asked admiring Hiccup's deep green eyes.

"Yes it matters." Hiccup said adamantly. "I want to know how much trouble I will be in when I get back to the village." Hiccup stood up and started pacing. "What am I going to do? How am I going explain where I have been? What are they going to say?" Hiccup was muttering. "In Odin"s name." Hiccup cursed. "What will I tell Astrid. I kissed a guy. She is gonna kill me." Hiccup's face went ghostly pale, as he fell onto his backside. Clasping his head in his Hands.

Jack went over and sat next to Hiccup. "Is something wrong?" jack ask leaning over to kiss Hiccup on the cheek.

"That's not helping." Hiccup said.

"Come on lighten up." Jack said. "Why worry about what has not happened yet?" Jack asked.

"I can't stop worrying." Hiccup said. "I start and it is like an avalanche." "Think about fun things." Jack said. "The future will hold what it will Hold. There is nothing you can do about it once you make a choice, so don't worry it will work out how it will." Jack said.

"So you are some sort of sage now?" Hiccup teased, and laughed.

Jack smiled."Now that's the spirit." He said. "So do you want to start heading to your village?" he asked nudging him.

"Do you think it is safe?" Hiccup asked not really sure he wanted to leave quite yet.

"Yeah. why?" Jack asked wondering why Hiccup was nervous. "I just don't want to fall through the ice again." Hiccup said.

"You wont." Jack said. "I promise that I will keep you safe." Jack put his arm around Hiccup.

"Ok if you are sure..." Hiccup said.

Jack got up and pushed down the ice wall. "Ready?" he asked.

"yeah" Hiccup replied.

Jack grabbed Hiccup's hand and started pulling him. "Which way is your village?" Jack asked.

Hiccup pointed in the direction that he thought the village was. so they started heading that way.

>Hiccup was having a hard time staying upright on the ice. "Woah. I mean we have ice skating on berk, but seriously without the skates it is hard." Hiccup said to Jack loosing balance again.

"Really?" Jack asked. "I have never tried it using skates."

"Why not? It is so much easier with skates." Hiccup asked surprised.

"Never had skates." Jack said. "We should hurry up, so you don't get too cold." Jack said.

"Yeah it is a bit chilly."Hiccup said. "You are really good at skating. How did you learn?" Hiccup smiled.

"Practice. since I don't feel cold I can practice whenever I want, However long I want." Jack said. "This is so much fun isn't it?" Jack asked smiling back at Hiccup as they picked up a little speed.

"Yes it... woah." Hiccup said as he started to fall.

Jack Held on Tighter to hiccup supporting him. "Don't fall, the ice is hard." Jack said, Hiccup's arm in one hand his staff in the other.

"I know that." Hiccup said to jack. "Thanks, by the way." Hiccup said, he then caught a view of Berk. "There it is." Hiccup said excitedly.

"It doesn't look like much." Jack laughed. "You said there is a village here?" Jack asked.

"Yes there is." Hiccup said. "it is just buried in snow from the blizzard." He said adamantly.

"Ok if you are certain." Jack said. "lets see then." Jack finished.

"Yes." Hiccup said.

It took a couple of hours for them to reach Berk, by the time they reached Berk the sun had nearly reached mid-sky. Now there was some more movement on the island. People moving around the island the day starting. They hear a high pitched yell. "HICCUP!" Jack noticed a Blonde haired girl running around.

"Who is that?" He asked hiccup.

"That" Hiccup sighed. "Is Astrid."

"So that is the girl you said would kill you?" Jack asked. "She doesn't look, That scary." Jack teased.

"You haven't seen That side of her." hiccup teased back.

"She looks worried." Jack said as he and Hiccup started walking up the island, Jack in the lead.

Astrid spots Hiccup. "HICCUP!" She charges towards him. Directly at Jack.

"Jack." hiccup says as Astrid goes right through him. "What in Odin's name?" Hiccup mutters as Astrid passes right through Jack, realizing too late Astrid's intent as he feels her fist slam into his face knocking hims on his back. As he lay sprawled upon the snow he asked. "what was that about?"

"You scared us." Astrid said angrily. "Where in Odin's name were you?" She said offering her hand to help Hiccup back to his feet.

"That really hurt." Hiccup said rubbing his jaw after he got back to his feet. "It was that wind I couldn't break free I lost grip on the dragon..." Hiccup thought about it 'if she did not see Jack I can't tell her the truth' He then continued. "I fell. Then I woke up on an island I didn't recognize. I managed to find shelter before the storm hit and waited it out there." Hiccup finished.

"Wow Hiccup, you really showed some guts." Astrid said as she hugged Hiccup.

"Hiccup, there ye are lad." A villager says to him. "Yer father's been looking fer ya." the villager walks by.

Hiccup walks towards his house Jack follows

Stoic rushes out and hugs Hiccup. "Where were you?" He asks.

Stoic stands there as Hiccup recounts his tale. "You should probably get some rest, you can join the rest of the village around the fire tonight." stoic said as he walked away.

"Whats with the 'you can join the village around the fire tonight'" Jack asked.

"Every winter after the first storm, the entire village gathers around a huge bonfire and the village elders tell old stories of vikings and winters past." Hiccup Explained leading the way to his room. as they got to Hiccup's room, Hiccup motioned to his bed and asked. "Want to join me?" Hiccups bed was large he had to get a bigger bed to help accommodate when Tootheless has the desire to lay with him.

"Sure. If you don't mind that is?" Jack said smiling. "Looks comfy." Jack said jumping on to the center.

"Hey, move over." Hiccup said climbing in shoving Jack where needed. Hiccup hadn't realized how tired he was until he was laying down. "Sleep well" He said to Jack grabbing his hand.

Jack sat up and kissed Hiccup on the cheek. "You too."

Hiccup couldn't help but smile as he fell asleep.

>"Hey, Jack wake up!" HIccup said shaking Jack's shoulders. "Wake up. we need to get ready to head to the bonfire." Hiccup said climbing out of bed and putting on a new set of clothing.

"Uhh... I'm up!" Jack said rolling off the bed.

'We will be late for the stories if you don't hurry up." Hiccup said dragging Jack towards the door.

"Whats the rush?" Jack asked. "They're just stories." Jack said, managing to get his feet under him.

"They are a Berk tradition." Hiccup said. "The other villagers would think it very strange if the chief's son wasn't there for it." He said as he went through the door.

"Ok." Jack said feigning disappointment.

They arrived just in time to hear the elders start the story. 'Lets sit here." Hiccup said planting himself on a bench near the edge.

The story started.

"A long time ago there was a great battle between the norse men and romans the two forces met on the Island of vaylikt. When the two forces met they were evenly matched what seemed like it would be a short fight turned into a great battle both sides had many casualties. the norse heard that the romans had reinforcements on the way and would arrive in the next few days. when their own would take at least a fortnight to get there."

"There ye are Hiccup." stoic bellowed over the elders. "come sit here by the fire where it is warm." He Beckoned his son.

"I am fine here" Hiccup responded.

"I insist!" Stoic said. "There is ice forming by you."

"Really?" Hiccup asked looking beside him. "wow" Hiccup sat where Stoic suggested.

"Why did you listen to him?" Jack asked. "You said you were fine, where you were." Jack said.

"He is my father." Hiccup said.

"May we continue?" The elders ask looking angrily at Stoic and Hiccup.

"Go ahead." Stoic said.

"Fine then." The elders said. "This news spread around the viking camp like wild fire. One certain young man heard it and was searching for a friend he claimed saved his life when he was a child."

Another elder piped up. "His story was this. He was told by his father that the ice was too thin for him to skate on, but he could not wait any longer to skate. He donned his skates and went onto the ice. He started slowly when he did not fall through the ice he slowly began skating faster and towards the center. Then he heard a loud 'CRACK' before he could get back towards the edge. The ice opened up below him he tried to grab something but he wasn't close enough to the edge. He stabbed his dagger into the ice but that started to crack also. His head went under it was so cold, it was getting hard to move. He felt a hand grab his shirt, and pull him upwards. He gasped as his head left the water, he barely got a look at his rescuer before he was gone. Then he described his rescuer to his father. "He looked to be a young man, with snow white hair, wearing dark clothing."

His father responded. "He sounds to be 'Jokul Frosti'. A winter spirit that most people cannot see."

"I did not know he actually existed." The son said.

"As I was saying" the other elder spoke up. "The young man was searching for his friend. 'Jokul!' he shouted. 'what is up' Jokul asks. the young man explains the situation with the romans. Jokul responds 'Don't worry I will help' and he was gone. over the next week there was no sign of the romans reinforcements the Viking ships arrived and they drove the romans out." The elder sat down.

A voice in the crowd asked. "What did Jokul do?"

The elder responds. "None of us are quite sure."

Walking back to the house hiccup and jack are talking.

"That Jokul sounds kind of like you..." Hiccup said.

Jack responds. "Maybe he is?"
